Here is a diagram of the persons who are considered your immediate family members:

For purposes of the application process, you have a bona fide relationship with an immediate family member if:

1. The family member is alive, AND
2. Your relationship with the family member has not been dissolved, AND
3. Any of the following is true:
 - Within the past year, you lived with the family member in the same household for 30 days or more, OR
 - Within the past year, you and the family member shared ownership of any real or personal property worth $1,000 or more, OR
 - Within the past year, you provided the family member, or the family member provided you, with a payment, gift, services or discount worth $1,000 or more.

Example: Let's say you have a sister who is currently living and you have not severed legal relationships with her. In that case, the relationship fits the first 2 requirements for a bona fide relationship. Now you have to figure out the 3rd part –

- Did your sister live with you for 30 days or more the last year? If yes, you have a bona fide relationship with her.
- Even if she did not live with you, did you co-own real estate or personal property worth $1,000 or more? If yes, you have a bona fide relationship with her.
- Even if the first two did not occur, did you provide her, or she provide you, with $1,000 or more in money or services? If yes, you have a bona fide relationship.
